

Privacy Notice

Effective Date: 10/19/2023

TopBloc collects and uses personal information for various reasons. When we do so, we will use it in accordance with applicable laws.

Some jurisdictions, including the European Economic Area ("EEA"), the United Kingdom ("UK"), and Switzerland, require a legal basis – a reason why TopBloc is legally allowed to collect and use your personal information. TopBloc adheres to the principals of the EU-U.S. Data Privacy Framework (EU-U.S. DPF), the UK extension to the EU-U.S. DPF, and the Swiss-U.S. Data Privacy Framework (Swiss-U.S. DPF) as set forth by the U.S. Department of Commerce. TopBloc relies on the EU-U.S. DPF as a legal basis for transfers of personal information. To view TopBloc's Data Privacy Framework Notice as it pertains to personal information transferred from the EEA, UK and Switzerland, please visit https://topbloc.com/2023-topbloc-dpf-notice 101923/.

TopBloc will rely on the UK Extension to the EU-U.S. DPF and the Swiss-U.S. DPF as a legal basis to transfer personal information from the UK and Switzerland once the applicable local authorities approve the Adequacy Decisions. In the meantime, TopBloc continues to rely on the SCCs for the purpose of the UK and Swiss data protection law.

Below, we describe (1) in what instances we collect your information, (2) the categories of information we collect in those instances, (3) our purposes for collection, and (4) the legal bases for collection. If we need to collect other personal information from you, we will explain which information we need and why at the time we collect it.

About TopBloc

TopBloc is a leading Workday Services Provider. This means customers of the Workday software (companies, schools and governments) will engage the professional services of TopBloc to implement, deploy and support tailored Workday solutions to help them improve and sustain their businesses with Workday.

TopBloc does not sell our customers' users' data or monetize it by selling advertising. Our customers control the data they provide to TopBloc and TopBloc only uses it to provide the services for which TopBloc has been engaged.

Application

Some data protection laws in various jurisdictions distinguish between "controllers" and "processors" of personal information. While other jurisdictions may use different terminology, the concept typically remains the same. A controller decides why and how to process personal information. A processor only processes information on behalf of a controller based on the controller's instruction; the processor does not make decisions about personal information. TopBloc may be either a controller or a processor, depending on the scenario.

This Privacy Notice applies when TopBloc is the data controller of your personal information (unless a different TopBloc privacy statement is displayed when we collect your personal information), and explains how TopBloc collects, uses, and shares your personal information for its own purposes. For example, this Privacy Statement covers when you:

- Visit a TopBloc website that links to this Privacy Statement
- Interact with TopBloc as a representative of a company that has an account with TopBloc

(e.g. you are our customer or our supplier)

- Create or use an account offered directly by TopBloc (as opposed to an account offered by our customers)
- Register for or attend a TopBloc marketing, learning, recruiting, or training event or webinar
- Provide us with feedback about our products or services
- Receive a sales or marketing communication from us, including emails or telephone calls

This Privacy Notice does not cover how we process personal information on behalf of our customers as a processor. If you are an employee, a student, or a job applicant of an organization that uses a Workday product/service or TopBloc service and you have questions or concerns about the personal information your organization holds in Workday or shares with TopBloc about you (when Workday/TopBloc is a processor), please direct your request to that organization. TopBloc cannot respond directly to your request. Additionally, Workday's Privacy Statement can be accessed HERE.

If you are a TopBloc employee or job applicant or you visit a TopBloc facility, information about how we use and protect your information is communicated to you in a separate statement.
